Forty-three patients with cerebral gliomas were examined by magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) after stereotactic surgery. The patients were examined 1-3 times after surgery. The MRI was performed with a 1.5 T superconducting magnet (Magnetom Vision plus, Siemens, Erlangen, Germany). T1-weighted spin-echo (SE) and T2-weighted SE images were obtained. The lesions were located in the frontal or temporal lobes and the Sylvian fissure. They were divided into low- and high-grade tumors. Tumors with low-grade histology (grade I or II) had a mean growth rate of 0.84 mm per month and low-grade tumors had an average volume of 23.5 cm3 (mean follow-up: 18 months, range 1-72). Tumors with high-grade histology (grade III or IV) had a mean growth rate of 3.6 mm per month and average growth rate of 82157476af
